CORDWELLS CONCRETE

RE: Concrete Price

Dear Valued Customer,

Cordwells Concrete advises that, effective 1st July 2026, we will be implementing a general concrete price increase in conjunction with a reduction in our current fuel related surcharge adjustment.

Over recent months, we have continued to closely monitor diesel pricing and broader operating costs across our business. While retail diesel bowser pricing has eased, significant cost pressures remain across the supply chain, including raw materials, freight, quarry operations, labour, cementitious products and production inputs.

To ensure we can continue delivering the quality, reliability and service standards our customers expect a general concrete price increase of $10.00 per m³ (ex GST) will apply to all concrete supplied from our operations effective 1st July 2026.

In recognition of recent reductions in retail diesel pricing, Cordwells Concrete will also remove its fuel related surcharge adjustments from the 1st of July 2026 and monitor this closely if required in the future.

Cordwells Concrete remains committed to absorbing as much cost pressure as possible while maintaining sustainable operations and continuing to provide high quality products and dependable service to our customers. We will continue to monitor market conditions closely and review these surcharges as operating conditions change, including developments relating to Federal Government fuel excise arrangements.

All current quotes will be honour up until their expiration dates.

Should you have any questions, please contact our team.

Thanks,
